

A screenshot of a Facebook page for 'Boycott Clay Nissan'. The page has a blue header with the Facebook logo and the name 'Boycott Clay Nissan'. Below the header is a large pink and black image with the text 'Boycott Clay Nissan' in white. The page shows 56,777 likes and 735 people talking about it. There are buttons for 'Liked', 'Photos', 'Likes', and 'Notes 20'. A community description is visible: 'Community Cause Site for Supporters of this Boycott, as well as for family and Friends of Jill Colter'. There are also links for 'About' and 'Suggest an Edit'.

May 3, 2013

Dear Facebook Friends,

We are happy to report that recent developments produced a breakthrough opportunity for open and direct communication between the Colter Family and the Clay Family. Over the past weeks, the two families have engaged one another, without lawyers, in two separate sit down meetings. These meetings resulted in an understanding between Clay Nissan and our sister Jill, and this boycott, that will end all legal proceedings by and between all parties, as well as end all activities associated with this boycott.

We think it is very important for all of you that have supported us and Jill to know how appreciative we are to the Clay Family for the civility, compassion and honesty they displayed throughout our direct discussions. In hindsight, the meeting and direct dialogue between our two families was probably long overdue and I think all parties involved feel a genuine sense of relief as a result of it and the common ground it produced. This will be the last posting on this page and after one week, this page will be permanently deleted.

This was such an emotional issue for all involved and when emotions run high, there can be unintended collateral damage to people and their lives on both sides. Those certainly were never our intentions and to those people, we offer our most sincere apologies.

This page will soon come down, but Jill and our family will always remember the support you offered Jill as she continues to battle Cancer. We also would like to ask you to extend your thanks to the Clay Family for their efforts to resolve the issue and help to bring to end what has been a very difficult time for them as well. Naturally we want our Sister as well as all people battling Cancer to be a Cancer Survivor. Our support for Jill will remain steadfast toward that end.

In closing, I want again to emphasize we would not be posting this "Last Post" if it were not for the open and direct talks between The Clays and The Colters. I can honestly say that the good I have seen in Scott Clay and his family far outweighs any derogatory posts I may have made toward the Clay's. In fact, I wholeheartedly encourage everyone that was either directly or indirectly involved with this site to kindly disregard any negative comments I may have made toward the Clay Family.

Sincerely,

Adam B. Colter

Thanks, the Colter Family